

There are so many methods of communication these days, sales people don't need to call my home. I'm pleased to be on the no-call list, telecommunicators generally disturb our daily lives. Telephone sales occur at odd times of the day, they are relentless, and the purposes of telephone sales aren't to inform me of their company or their product, they hope to catch you in the middle of making dinner or at other weak moments so you'll agree to their pitch. In home phone sales are annoying and bothersome, I'm glad for the last year I haven't had to deal with them. A person should feel comfortable and at peace in their own home.
